The Grand Orient of France promulgates as a definition of M., that it is an institution, essentially, philanthropic, philosophic and progressive, which has for its basis the existence of a God, and the immortality of the soul. — It has for its object the exercise of benevolence, the study of Universal Morality, and the practice of all the virtues.

Woman's Exclusion

This unattractive reputation of our Ancient Land marked is no evidence of a want of Confidence, respect, attachment to our wives Mothers Sisters Their exclusion from our temples when laboring is not so much of loss to them as it is to us. Apart from the chastening influence they exert in social intercourse, how great an improvement in the appearance of our Lodge rooms would be seen. Disorder in nest house keeping, which woman's eye is always quickest to detect would speedily be corrected. Regalia, Aprons, Scarfs Collars Working tools scattered about as the wildest disorder, as tho' there had been as frightful a storm as that which marks the closing scenes of Belshazzar's last feast, are often seen, requiring the hand of the lady to set to rights, as Major D. would say.

"Yes because man alone can do the work which is the usual work of a lady"
